PRICE THREE PENCE.

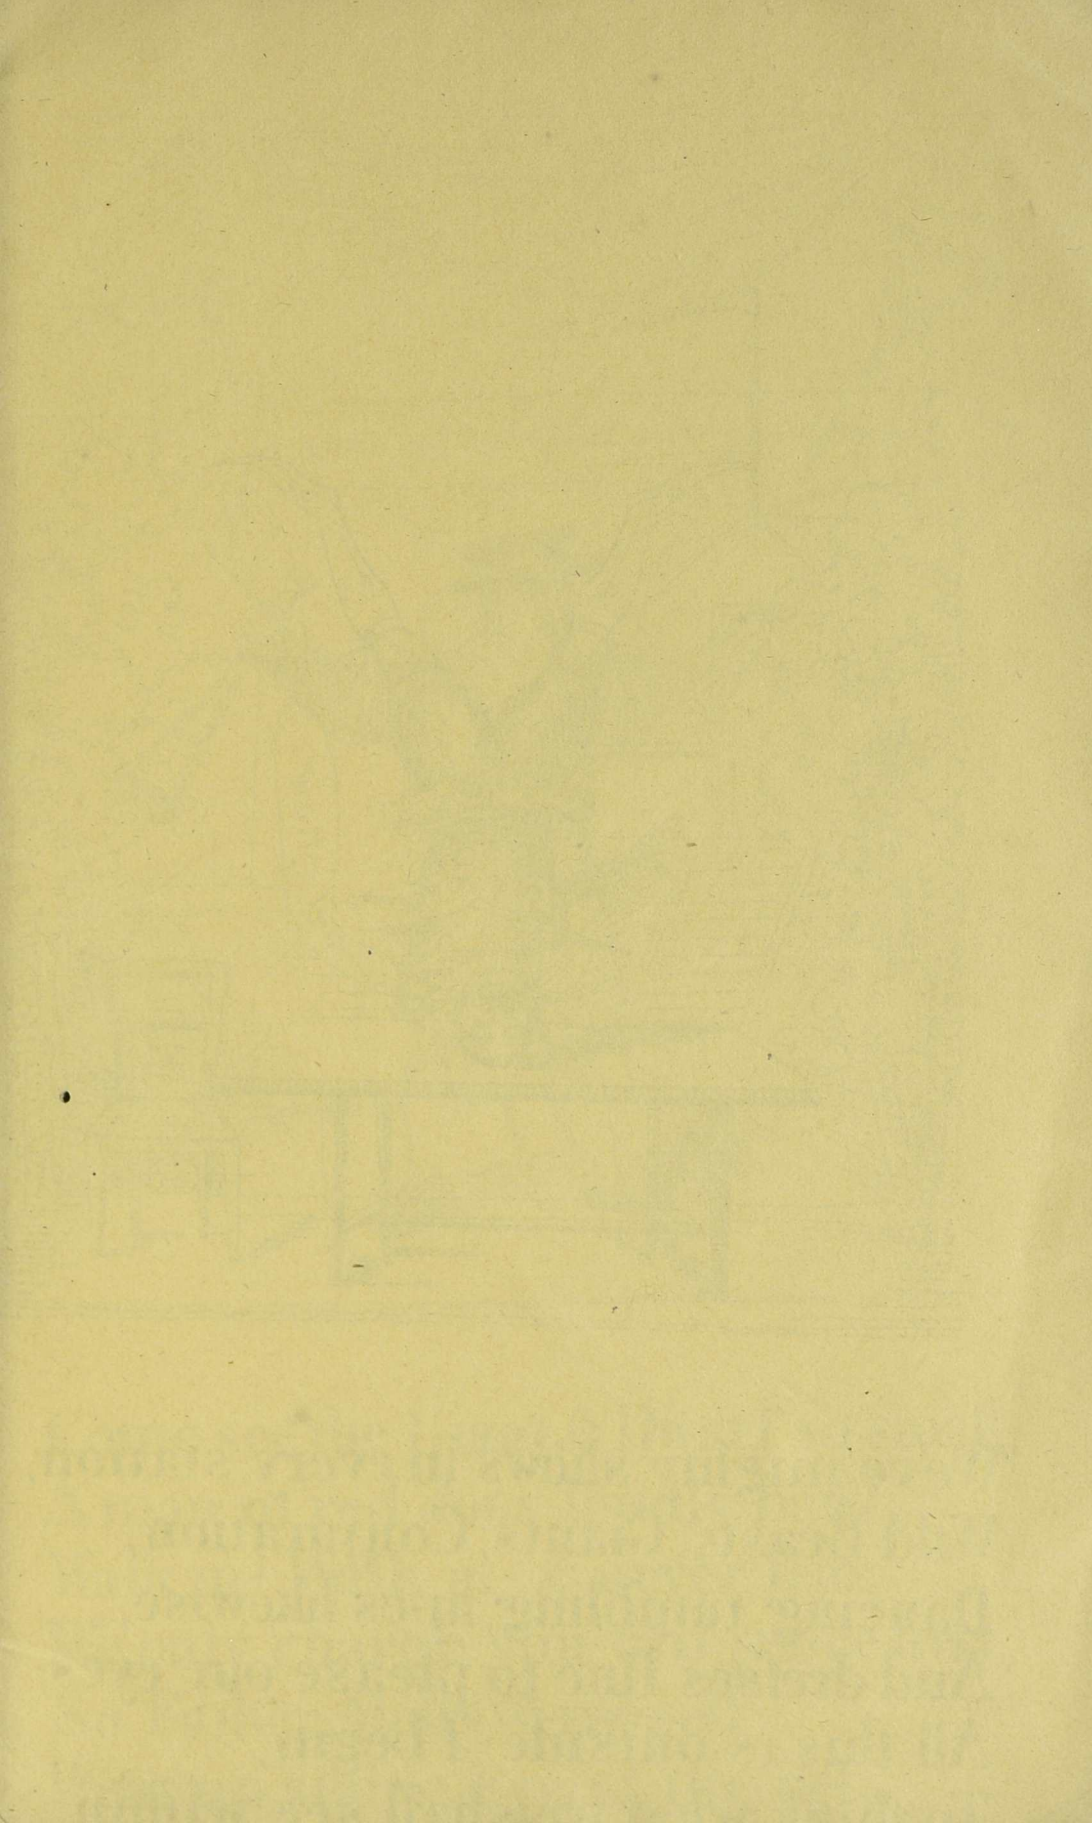

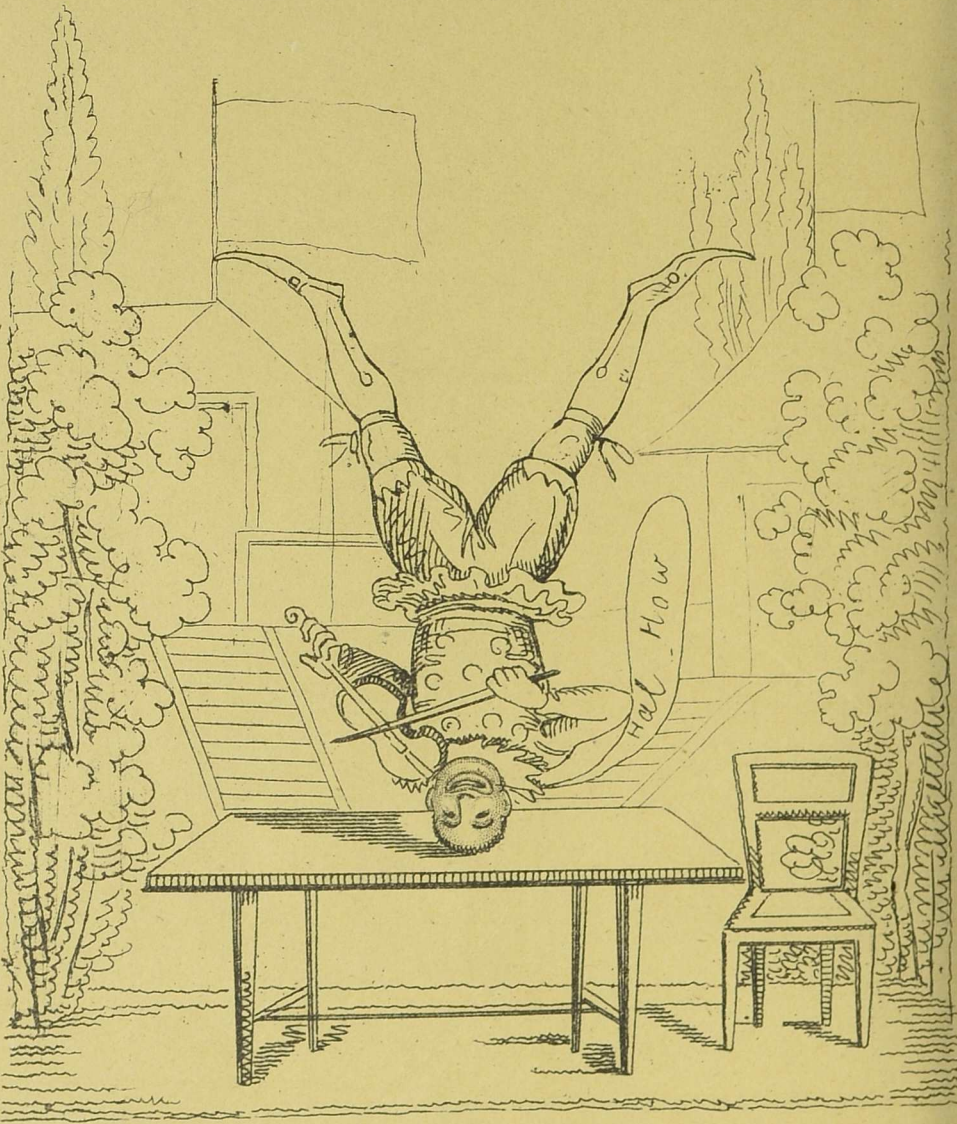

School's up my friends so let's prepare,
We must be off to see the Fair,
There's Father's horse & chaise I see,
All ready at the door for me,
We'll now get in & ride away,
To spend a mighty pleasant day.

The horse went fast we were not long,
And now we've got among the throng
See stalls with very pretty toys,
Appear for little girls & boys,
And all the world I do declare,
Seem now assembled at the fair.

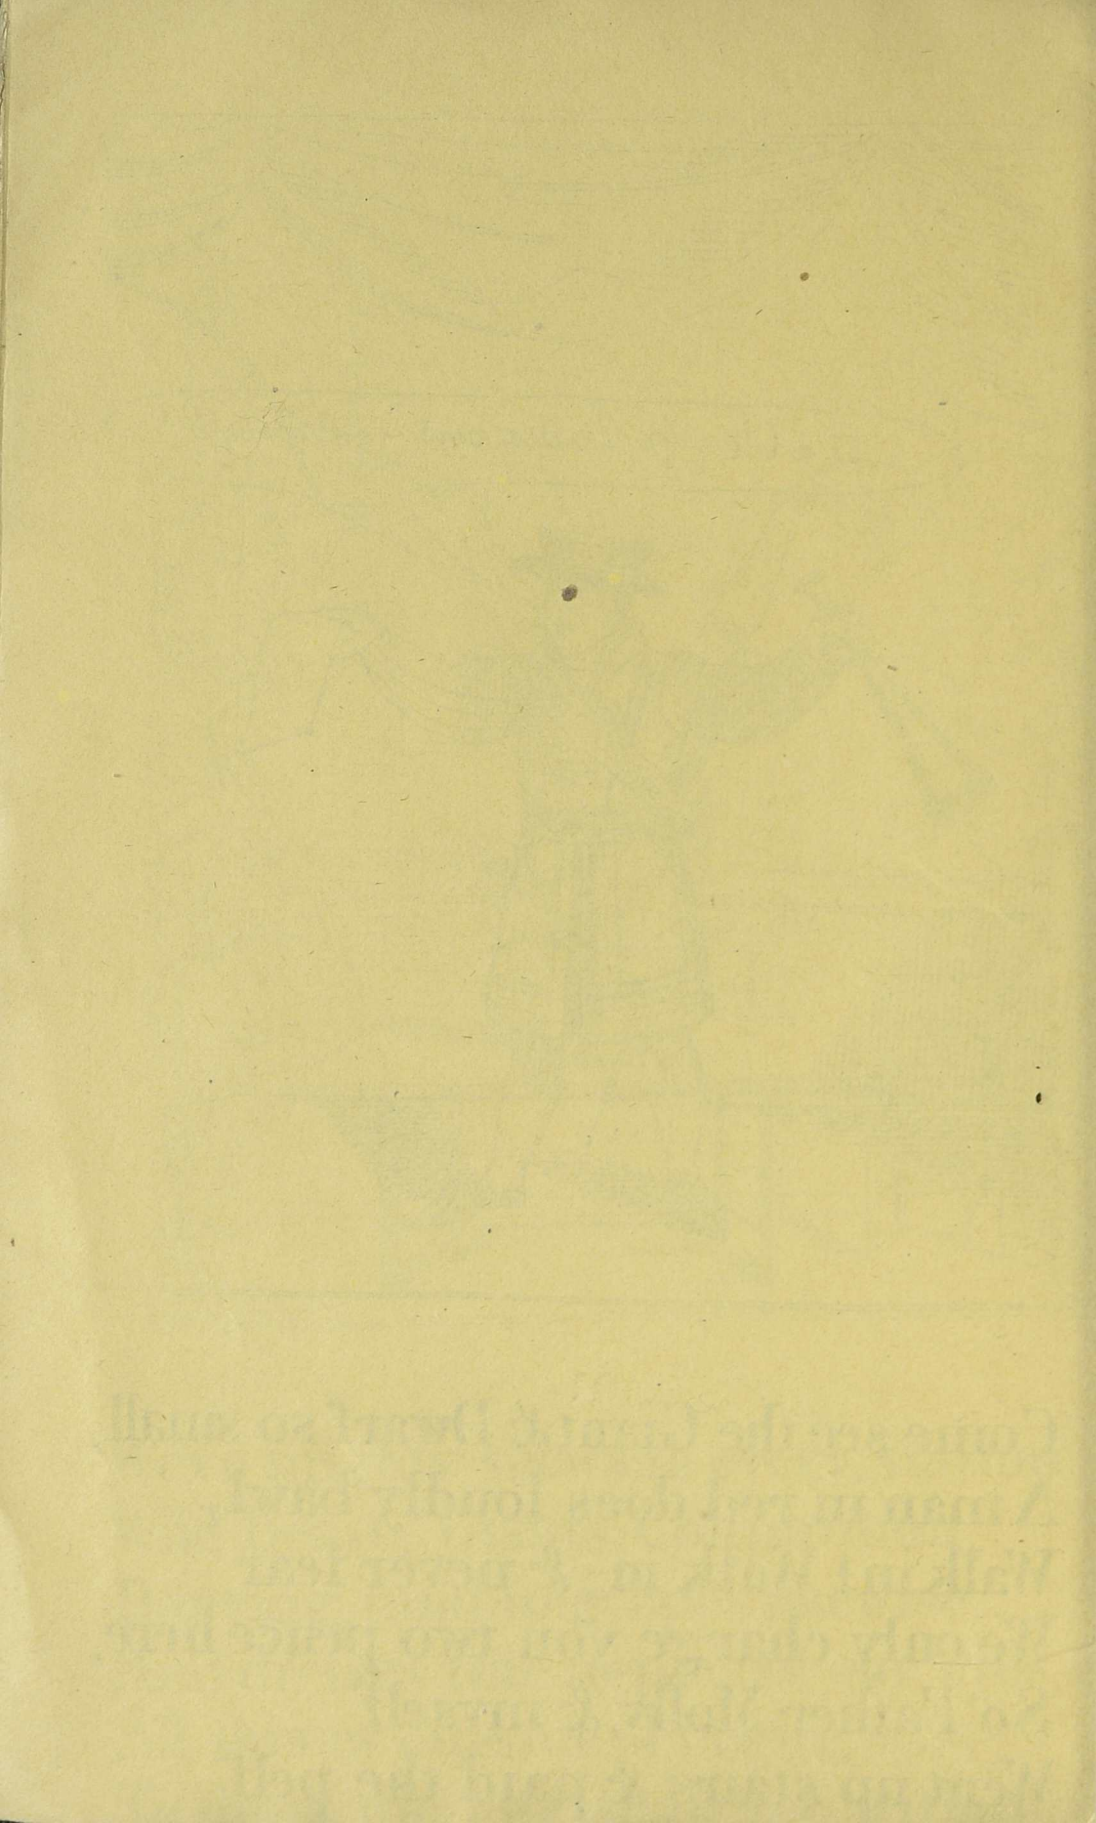

We've mighty shows in every station,
Wild Beast, Giants, Conjuraction,
Dancing, tumbling, apes likewise,
And dresses fine to please our eyes,
All this is outside - I begin,
To think what we shall see within.

Come see the Giant & Dwarf so small,
A man in red does loudly bawl,
Walk in! Walk in- & never fear,
We only charge you two pence here,
So Father, Molly, & myself,
Went up stairs & paid the pelf.

Now having journed from this show,
My Father says where will you go,
So fearing, I might Father tire,
We went to see a man eat fire,
He swallowed it as fast as I,
Can eat a piece of apple pie.

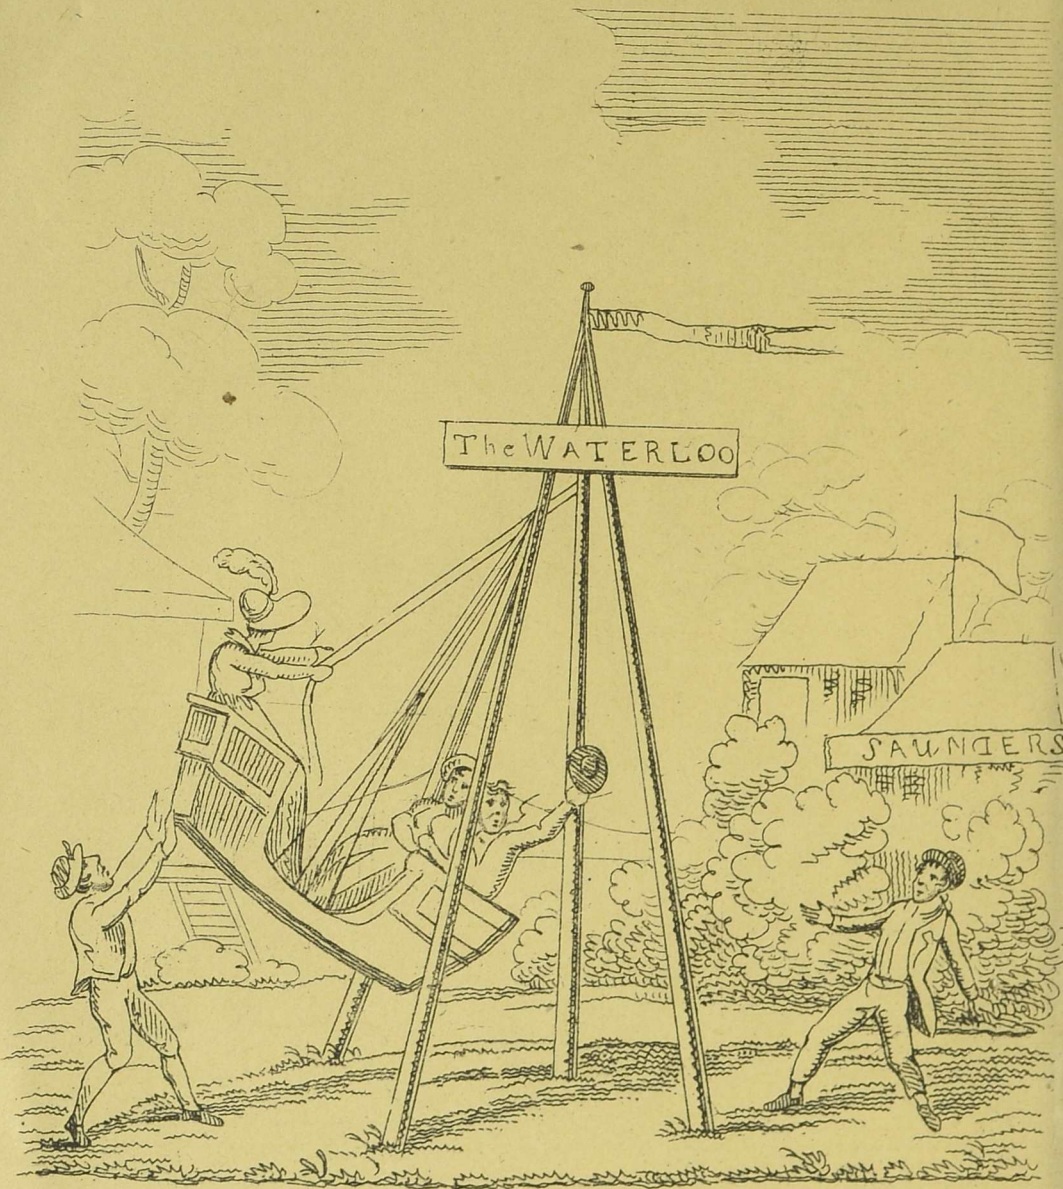

But when the Wild Beast, met our view,
We thought we could no better do,
Than go inside to see them all,
E'en Lion's, Tigers, & Monkeys small,
Camels, Elephants, & Bonassus,
We declared should never pass us.

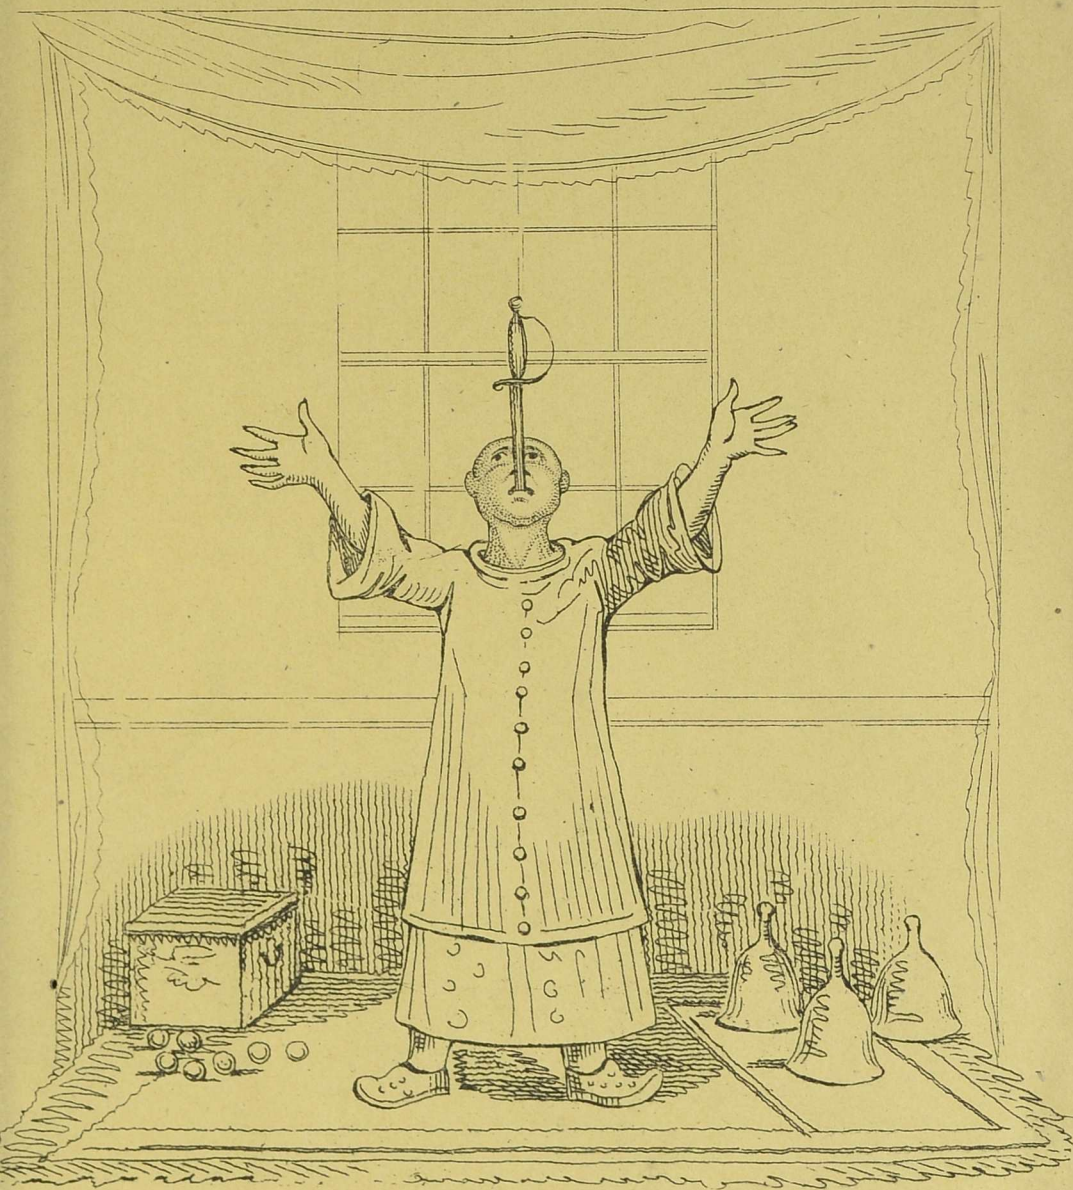

When we got in we were amazed,
On Dwarf & Giant both we gazed,
So having these two wonders 'spied,
We left them both quite satisfied,
And having once more op'd the door,
We rambled on to seek some more.

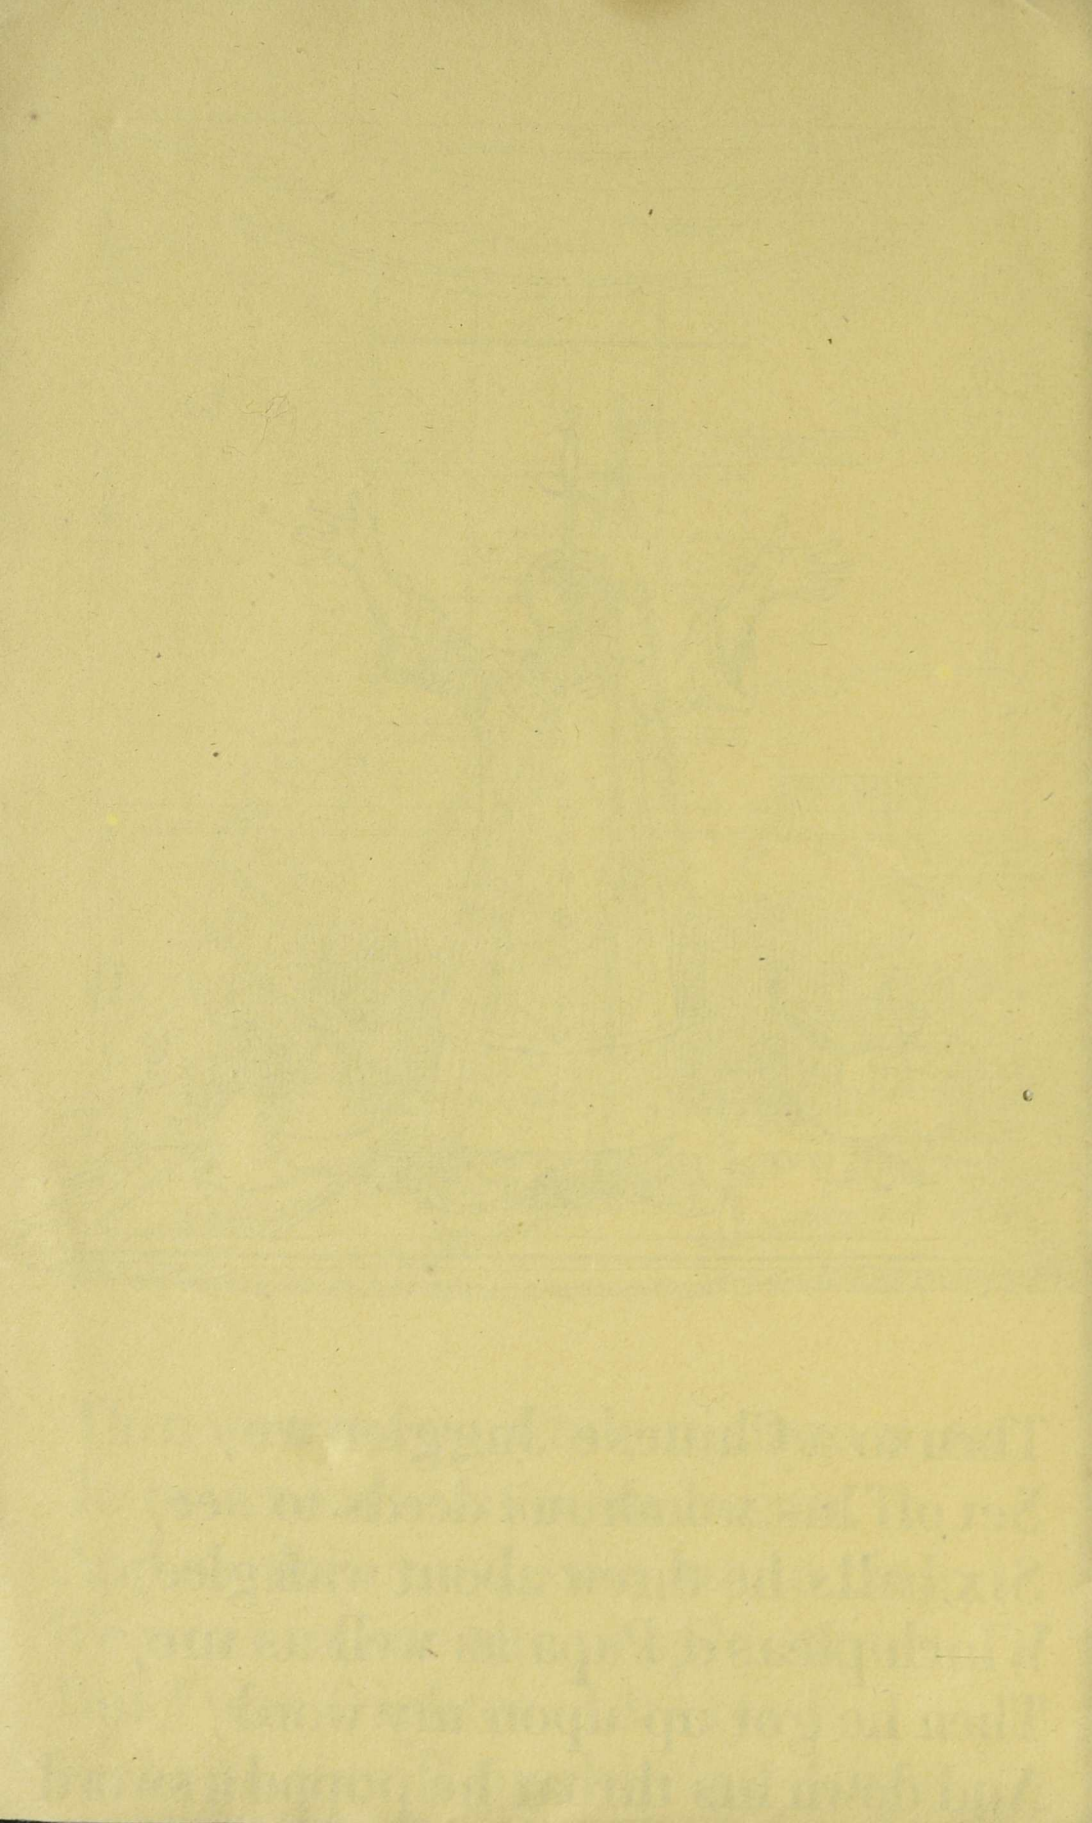

A sixpence more each person spent,
For into Saunders's we went,
There we enjoy'd the Horsemanship,
And saw them on the tight rope trip,
Vaulting, balaucing, & many things,
By persons dress'd as grand as Kings.

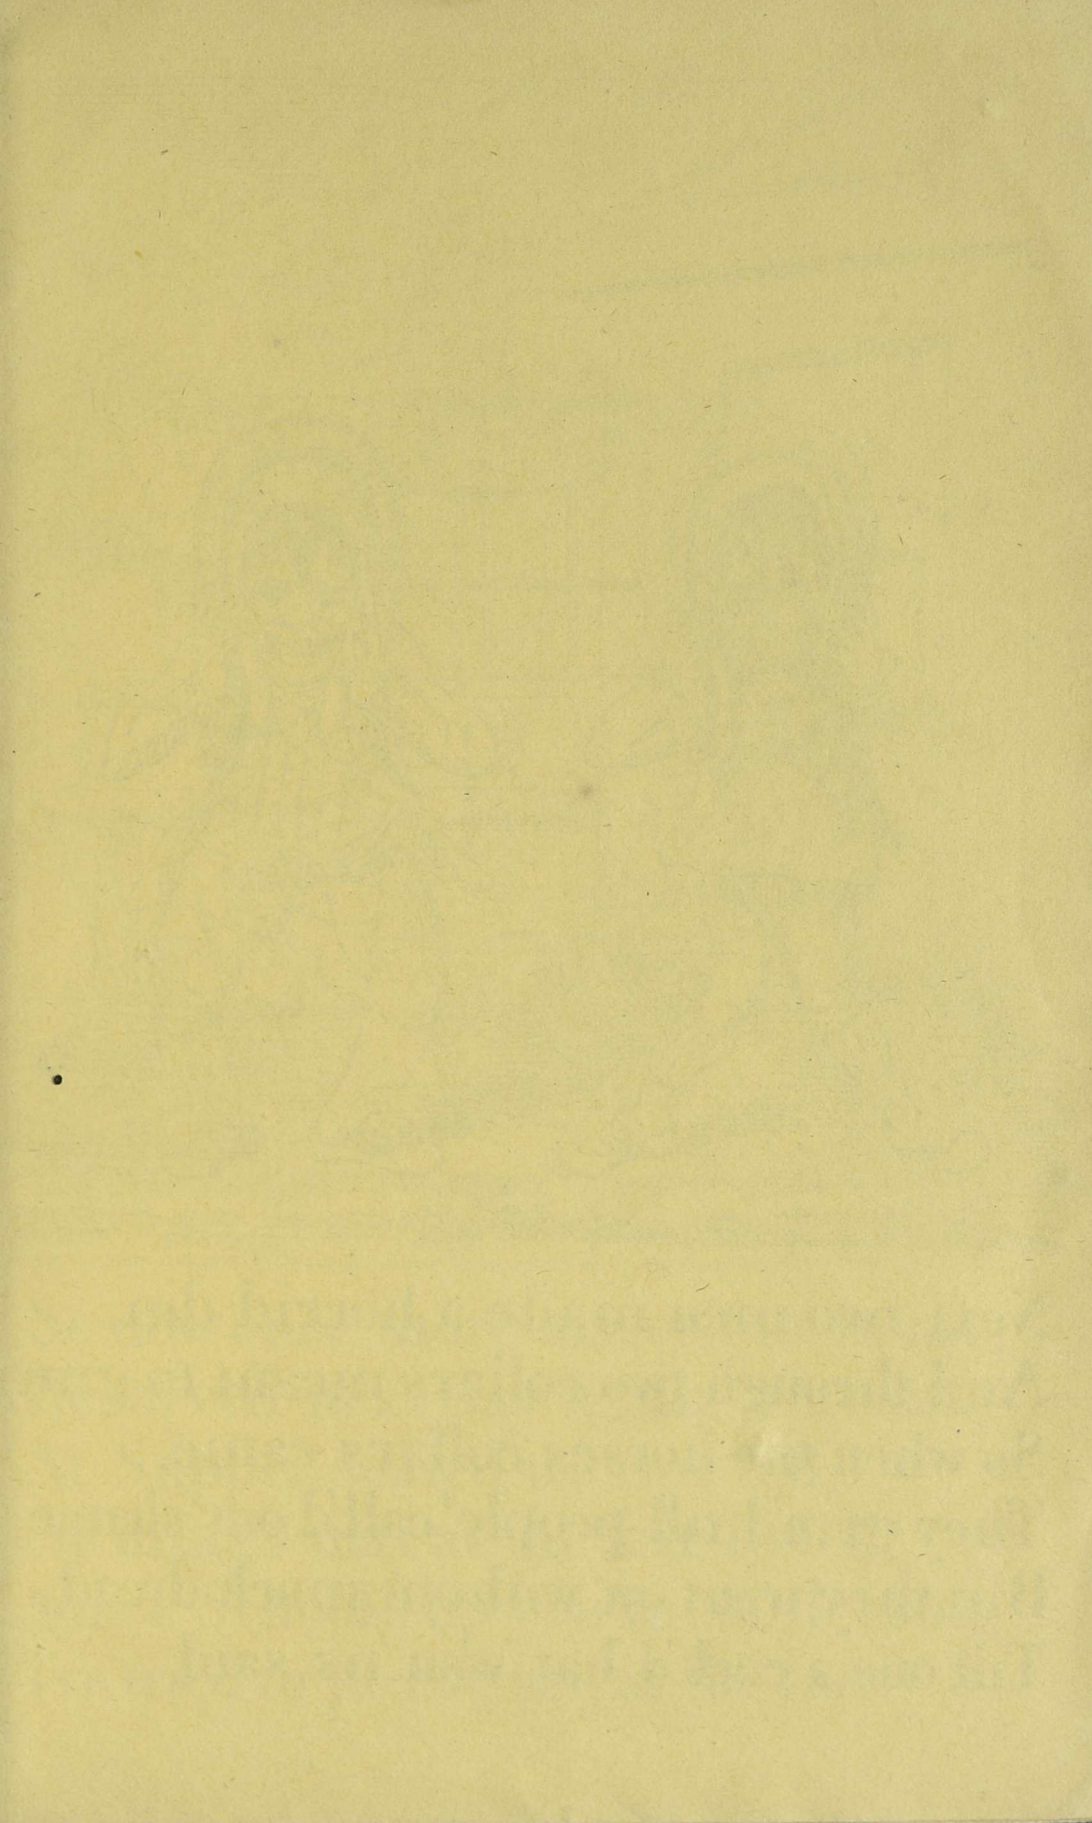

Then we went on while many a man,
To court our visit soon began,
And as they made the air to ring,
We went to see the people swing,
But I was frightened & says I,
Perhaps they'll tumble bye & bye.

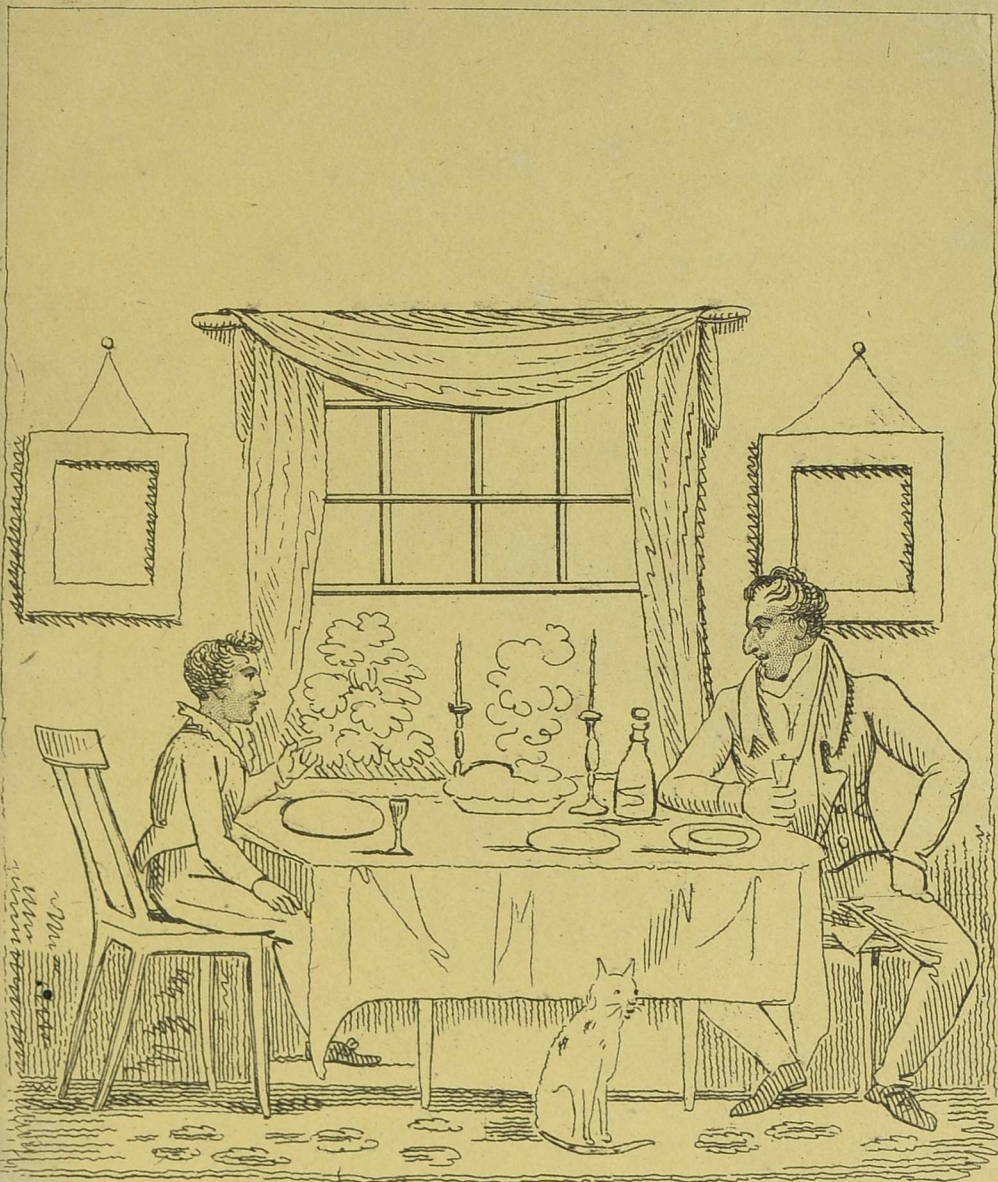

Then to a Chinese Juggler we,
Set off his wondrous deeds to see,
Six balls he threw about with glee,
Which pleas'd Papa as well as me,
Then he got up upon my word,
And down his throat he poppd a sword.

Next two men made a horrid din,
And through two collars meant to grin,
So when the horses collars came,
They grin'd till people' call'd out shame,
But they went on without much dread,
Till one a cock'd hat won 'tis said.

So now once more arrived at home,
Resolved next day again to roam,
At Supper seated we can tell,
All things that at the fair befell,
Since School's up you must declare,
I've tried to please you at the fair.
